

Ludo Ladders

Description

Ludo ladders was inspired by snakes and ladders and the original game of Ludo. Both games were fun growing up and this game a “mix of both but with a twist.” Ludo ladders is played with 2-4 people and there are 2 dice, but the second dice is only used once one of your counters has reached the end.

Game instructions:

1. Each player has 4 counters that start at their home base and the highest roll starts the game.
2. Players can use multiple counters at once.
3. Follow the board in a clockwise direction
4. Dice 2 will be used as soon as players reach the safe zone with one of their 4 counters.
5. Black tiles are safe zones and are used in case you are about to get overtaken by another player.
6. Land at a safe zone (black tile) and your counter is protected from being sent back to the start if you're about to be overtaken by another player
7. The first player to put their counters in the middle wins.
8. Only one counter can be moved per turn.

How the game is played:

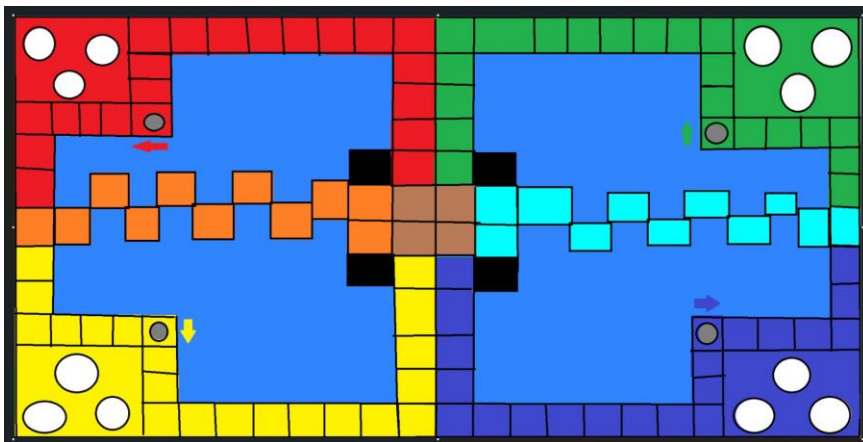

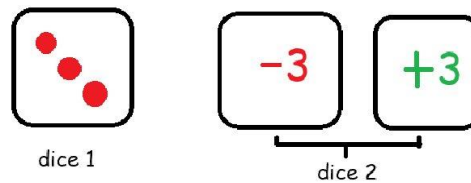

Each player will start at their home base and make their way towards the end of the board. Players will follow the arrows on their board to know which direction to go once they start. Each player will roll dice 1 and once one of their counters is at the finish that player can use the second dice. The second dice will allow the player whose turn it is to either gain +1-3 or lose -1-3. Players can go backwards with this role, so it makes it more competitive.

Feedback:

A few students had played my game and one piece of feedback i kept getting is that it was unclear on dice 2 if they should add or subtract to their total roll as i had not yet made that dice. However now i made that dice players should not have that issue anymore.

I was also told that the board lacks color, which the players were not wrong as i only brought a prototype of how i wanted the game to be however i have since resolved. Below you will see a sample of what i imagined the board game to look like, but it has been changed.

Ludo ladders final product:

This board was bought from amazon, however i have changed it so that it fits my Ludo Ladders. The black squares indicate the safe zone when players cannot be overtaken by an opponent if they are inside the black square
